Dear Friends,

As November unfolds, we find ourselves amidst a tapestry of change, both within our Church and the broader world. The recent conclusion of the Synod on synodality in Rome represents a significant shift in our perspective on the Church's functioning, emphasizing collaboration and mutual engagement, even if it did not entail major doctrinal modifications.

In Michigan, the vibrant autumn foliage has given way to the falling leaves, symbolizing the transition from the peak of life's beauty to the inevitable embrace of winter. Nature's cyclical rhythm mirrors the profound concept of the paschal mystery, where death serves as the gateway to rebirth.

However, amidst these harmonious transformations, the disheartening eruption of conflict in the Holy Land leaves us grappling with the stark reality of violence in a place considered sacred by Christians, Jews, and Muslims alike.

These manifold changes, from seasonal shifts to ecclesiastical transformations and global turmoil, can disrupt our accustomed lives and challenge our established beliefs. While the change of seasons is a familiar occurrence, it may be more difficult to envision the Church as increasingly synodal, emphasizing inclusivity and the significance of every voice. The distressing events in the Holy Land evoke a deeper sense of helplessness in the face of profound violence.

In this context, the upcoming Solemnity of Christ the King on November 26 holds particular significance. I like this feast day because it is a poignant reminder that in midst of changes, Christ remains our unwavering anchor. Reflecting on the Gospel reading, we are presented with a notion of kingship starkly different from traditional concepts, one that centers on service rather than authority.

The Gospel reading, often referred to as the Last Judgment, challenges us to evaluate our lives based on how we treat the most vulnerable, for these are the individuals with whom Jesus identifies most closely. Christ the King, in this context, embodies not the might of a ruler but the humility of a servant. It is through caring for the weakest among us that we draw nearer to Him.

Two events at the Center this month will help us deepen our commitment to serving those in the margins. Paul Fahey will reflect on the call to friendship and solidarity on Nov. 8, and Molly Keating with other panelists will offer ideas for how we grieve with those who have experienced loss on Nov. 14.

As we navigate the shifting landscapes of November, we are grateful for your steadfast partnership in the mission and ministry of the Center. Let us remember that our faith calls us to serve and assures us that we can "cast our cares on the Lord because he cares for us." (1 Peter 5:7)

Upcoming Programs

Brothers and Sisters All
Wednesday, Nov. 8
7-8:30 p.m. ET

Our prophetic call as Christians is to cooperate with the coming of God's Kingdom in a world marked by inequality, polarization, and a "throwaway culture." Paul Fahey will explore the call in "Fratelli Tutti" - the letter on social friendship and human fraternity by Pope Francis.

Spiritual Practices for Grieving Well

Tuesday, Nov. 14
10-11:30 a.m. ET

Explore spiritual practices for coping with grief and loss. Expressing our grief in both personal and community prayer provides solace, meaning, and a sense of connection during challenging times. Panelists will share valuable insights into navigating their own grief journeys. This presentation is part of the 55 Plus Series, exploring spirituality and vitality in the second half of life.

Inconceivable! Navigating Truth in a Mixed-Up World

Thursday, Nov. 16
7-8:30 p.m. ET

In today's world it can be almost (but not nearly) impossible to know what information to trust and even harder to help family, friends, and neighbors who have fallen victim to misinformation. Kevin McIntosh is a community builder and loves making new connections. At the One America Movement, he serves as the Faith Over Division Senior Manager.
